WHY JUNE IS THE PERFECT TIME TO CHECK IN

The middle of the year is a natural pause point. Just like you'd review finances or performance goals, your technology deserves the same attention. Cyber threats evolve quickly, compliance rules shift, and software updates keep coming. If your business hasn't done a tech checkup in 2024 yet, June is the time.

Windows 11 Transition: Don't Wait Until 2025

Microsoft will end support for Windows 10 in October 2025. That feels far away—until you realize that updating hardware, training employees, and rolling out new systems takes months. Get a head start now to avoid last-minute chaos.

Compliance Pulse Check

If you're in healthcare, finance, or law enforcement, regulations like HIPAA, SOX, or CJIS don't take summer breaks. A mid-year review helps ensure policies are current, training is documented, and audits won't catch you off guard.

Backups & Recovery: Test, Don't Guess

Many businesses assume their backups will work—but don't find out otherwise until it's too late. This month, pick one critical file or system and test restoring it. A successful recovery now means fewer surprises later.

Vendor Simplification = Stronger Security

If you're still juggling one provider for phones, another for printers, another for cameras, and another for IT... that's too many cracks for things to slip through. Consolidating under one trusted partner saves time, money, and headaches.

ON A PERSONAL NOTE:

June isn't just a good time to check in on your business—it's a great time for personal resets too. Whether that means reviewing family budgets, refreshing routines, or scheduling time away to recharge, a little mid-year reflection goes a long way. We are at the halfway point in the calendar, which makes it the perfect time to take a step back and look at the bigger picture. At work, that might mean reviewing goals or planning ahead for the second half of the year. At home, it can mean carving out time for the things that often get pushed aside—family dinners, hobbies, or that project you've been meaning to start.

It's also the start of true summer here in Middle Tennessee. The long days and warm evenings are a reminder to balance the grind with a little joy. Whether it's grilling out, watching the fireflies, or planning a quick weekend road trip, don't forget to enjoy the season.

READY FOR YOUR MID-YEAR TECH CHECKUP?

Let's walk through your systems, security, and compliance together—so the second half of 2024 is stronger than the first.
